Reading at Uplands

What does it look like?

Part 1

Reading is a fundamental skill that crosses over many subjects. Reading is prioritised to allow pupils to access the full curriculum.

Book Talk Books

Children read a variety of books during this reading session. (Fiction, Non-Fiction, Poetry) Sometimes the whole class will have the same book; other times different tables will have different books depending on the children's reading age. These are regularly updated.

Other Cross-Curricular Links

Reading activities (focusing on the Reading Gems) are planned for, linked to our topics, which are completed during our creative curriculum lessons.

Amount of Reading

As well as reading during Book Talk, children read regularly at Uplands. The lower the children's reading age the more times they are heard read.

Children's Reading Books

After completing the NGRT reading tests children are allocated a reading shelf. This allows children to then choose books from a progressive reading collection with a broad range of books available.

Free Readers

When the children reach a reading age of 9 ½ years they then go onto free readers. This is where the children choose to read books from our library, our reading corners, and books from home as their reading book.
